Vice president resigns, leaves human resource position open

By CHRIS SEPER
Associate news editor

Eastern's assistant vice president of human resources will resign to take another job in California later this month, leaving another vacant position to fill in the school's administration.

Jim Pacino announced this week his resignation will take affect at the close of business on March 26, after which he will join Chapman University in Orange County to take the position of personnel director.

Pacino will assume the new position at Chapman on April 1.

Including Pacino's post, Eastern has administrators in acting positions as the vice president for student affairs and the Physical Plant director. Search committees have been assigned to both positions.

A new assistant vice president of human resources may have to wait until after the administrative framework in Business Affairs is restructured, said Charles Colbert, the vice president in that area.

Colbert has just appointed a 12-member committee to look at the restructuring. Since Pacino's resignation comes at this time, the committee is currently looking into how human resources could be reconfigured.

"They may come back with a recommendation and they may not," Colbert said, adding he has no intention of leaving the position vacant permanently.

"When we start advertising to replace the person, we need to know how the administrative structure is when they come in."

Pacino's position of assistant vice president of human resources has not been filled with an interim worker, Colbert said. Pacino said that decision would be made by Colbert and Eastern President David Jorns.

"It's a family priority to get back with our family," he said. "It's a purely family (and) personal decision."

Pacino graduated with a masters degree in public administration from California State University and has served Eastern since 1990.

"I'm leaving with a lot of regret," Pacino said. "I'm not going to be a part of Eastern and part of the rebuilding."

"I came at a time poised to rebuild. I really enjoyed working with competent faculty and staff — they have all been a part of this

Colleges might be combined as early as June

By DAVID M. PUTNEY
Administration editor

Eastern may combine its six colleges into four as early as June if it follows the suggestion of its Restructuring Committee.

One college would be made from parts of the colleges of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Health, Physical Education and Recreation, Fine Arts and Applied Science, according to a document obtained Wednesday by The Daily Eastern News.

A draft of the proposed restructuring plan says that the Lumpkin College of Business and the College of Education would remain untouched. With the exception of the journalism and speech communication departments, the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences would also avoid changes.

The colleges of Fine Arts, Applied Sciences and Health, Physical Education and Recreation would be combined in their entirety.

The administration will be releasing its draft of the plan early Thursday, according to Terry Weidner, associate vice president for academic affairs. Weidner would not comment on the accuracy of the News' draft.

Documents indicate the new college would have 187 faculty, 2,521 majors and 12 departments.

Jon Laible, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, said Wednesday afternoon that he had not seen the draft, but he had been told the consolidation would result in four colleges.

Barbara Hill, provost and vice president for academic affairs said that the 19-member reorganization committee agreed not to discuss any of its findings until they are officially released. Hill has been acting as facilitator for the committee drafting the reorganization plan.

The plan was formulated by the Restructuring Committee, not Eastern administrators, said committee member John Miller.

Eastern President David Jorns, while declining to address specific points of the plan, said one of the goals of the exercise will be to

Governor's budget requires surcharge

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Gov. Jim Edgar unveiled a $29.2 billion budget proposal Wednesday that would make permanent the income tax surcharge and keep all the money for state programs, inviting a political brawl with Democrats and local officials.

The Republican governor's plan for the fiscal year beginning July 1 is far less painful for state agencies and those who count on their services than his past budgets, but it raised howls from those opposed to the state taking back tax money that has been shared with local governments since the surcharge's creation in 1989.

Edgar said state agencies need the money after taking all the cuts they could absorb in his first two years.

"If you want to cut deeper, you might as well eliminate them," he told a joint session of the General Assembly.

Edgar offered critics the choice of taking money that he would spend on education and court-ordered improvements in child welfare programs.

"It might be more politically popular for me to recommend that we do not act ... Or, it might be more expedient for me to recommend that we continue the surcharge and give local governments the same share they are receiving this year — about $211 million.

"But to take either of the politically expedient courses would be to take $211 million from education and from programs for abused and neglected kids in defiance of a court order, and this governor will not do that."

Leading Democrats like House Speaker Michael Madigan and Senate Minority Leader Emil Jones of Chicago accused Edgar of pushing for a "back-door" tax increase that shortchanges cities and counties.

"I would be prepared to vote for a tax increase if there were help for local governments to pay for police and fire salaries," Madigan said.

"However, if the only proposal on the table is to raise taxes to provide for an increase in the state bureaucracy, I'm not convinced that we need to do that."

Republicans have fought surcharge proposals in recent years. But new Senate President James equalize the number of employees in each of the reformed colleges.

The draft says that the new College of Liberal Arts and Sciences would have 3,038 majors with 254 faculty spread through 23 departments. The Lumpkin College of Business would have 1,850 majors and 63 faculty spread through six departments.

The College of Education would have 1,883 majors, 69 faculty and seven departments.

Jorns also said colleges with acting deans will be candidates for consolidation. The Council on University Planning and Budget originally suggested the consolidation to save money by reducing the number of dean positions.

The College of Applied Science, the College of Health, Physical Education and Recreation and the College of Fine Arts all have acting deans.

Hill said that the committee was charged with reducing the number of colleges without laying off anyone, eliminating departments, or cutting program effectiveness.

The acting deans of the three combined colleges had not seen the report as of Wednesday.

The committee met all day Monday and for several hours on Tuesday and Wednesday, Hill said.

Once the official report is issued, everyone at the university will have a chance to offer opinions about the plan, Hill said. The input will go back to the committee March 19. The Faculty Senate will hold open forums April 5 through 16. Hill will make her final recommendation on a restructuring plan by April 30.

If approved, the plan will take affect June 30.

Governors

"Pate" Philip, R-Wood Dale, predicted Edgar's surcharge plan would win approval now that the Senate is controlled by the GOP for the first time in 18 years.

"I support the governor absolutely," Philip said. "We're helping the very sensitive areas we should be helping."

If the General Assembly agrees, the income tax paid by individuals would remain at 3 percent, instead of falling 2.75 percent. The rate for corporations would stay at 4.8 percent, instead of falling to 4.4 percent on July 1.

Local governments would only receive the one-twelfth share they get from all income tax net proceeds.

Here are highlights of Edgar's budget plan for fiscal year 1994: - Education would get more than $5 billion from the general revenue fund, including a $110 million increase for elementary and high schools and a $37 million boost for colleges and universities - increases of 3.3 percent and 2.3 percent.

• The Department of Children and Family Services' budget would increase 15 percent to $904 million, with much of the money going for court-mandated improvements in services for abused and neglected children.

• Funding for a program to ensure that disabled people can get care at home instead of in state-run institutions would increase by $15 million, to $99 million. A federal court has ruled all eligible applicants must be accepted.

• The state's oft-criticized mental health system would get a 7 percent increase, to $934 million.

• The Corrections Department budget would increase 11 percent to $715 million, in part to open 1,902 new prison beds that will be ready by July 1.

• About 700 employees would be added to the state payroll after two years of budget cuts that reduced the number of employees under the governor's command by 4,000.

rebuilding."

Pacino's hiring came the same year Verna Armstrong, then-vice president for administration and finance, left the university amid charges of nepotism after her son was hired to a $32,700 per-year job. At that point, Drayton R. Justus was the director of human resources.

"He (Pacino) gave us a new look, a fresh perspective and a different way of looking at things," said Charles Colbert, vice president for business affairs who succeeded Armstrong.

When allegations of hiring improprieties surfaced again in January 1992, this time within the local Peace Meal program, Pacino was among those involved in conducting Eastern's investigation.

According to the Chapman personnel office, Pacino's new position is similar to Eastern's personnel director. The job focuses on human resources, the university's policies and their implementation.

Greek system wins numerous awards

By BRIAN HUCHEL

Eastern's Interfraternity and Pan-Hellenic Councils recently "brought home the gold," receiving numerous awards in a fraternity/sorority competition in Columbus, Ohio.

Eileen Sullivan, assistant director of student activities for greek affairs, said the Mid-American Interfraternity Council Association/Mid-American Pan-Hellenic Council Association is the largest undergraduate greek association in the country. It involves 16 different states, which translates into 200 campuses and approximately 1,500 students.

As part of the competition, Eastern's Interfraternity Council and Pan-Hellenic Council had to complete a 120 page award application. The application contained 20 questions about several different subjects.

Subjects included academic achievement, community service, council management, self-governance, judicial affairs, rush recruitment, public attendance, risk management and leadership development.

Eastern's IFC won an award in every category of the competition. The IFC also won the Jellison Award which is given to for the best overall fraternity system.

The Pan-Hellenic Council also did well, winning the campus and community relations award. The Pan-Hellenic Council also became finalist for the best overall sorority system, the Southerland Award.

"By winning these many awards, it shows that the IFC is trend-setting," Sullivan said. "They and the Pan-Hellenic Council are a role model system."

Chad Bandy, president of the Interfraternity Council, said the awards are quite an accomplishment for Eastern's greek system.

Eastern bodybuilders interested in entering the 1993 Mr./Ms. EIU Bodybuilding Championships must do so by Friday.

The competition, in its sixth year, was started by local power lifter, Darryl Latch, an official bodybuilding judge who has won several national and world titles in power lifting.

Only 10 people have signed up for the event which usually has 18 to 20 contestants, Latch said.

"I first started the program for the benefit of the students," Latch said. "It gives the Eastern students an opportunity to show off the work they have put into their bodies."

The Championships will take place March 12 in the Charleston High School Auditorium. Admission to the event, which is open to the general public, costs $5.

Students interested in signing up for the event must do so at the Sonlight Power Gym, 519 7th St. There is a $20 entry fee.

All Eastern students, whether part-time, full-time or graduate students, will be allowed to compete.

Krista Settles, a junior elementary education major who competed in last year's event, is ranked 10th in the nation for bench pressing 155 pounds while weighing only 105.

"I had a great time in the competition last year," Settles said, who will also participate in the championship. "The number of people entered, and the competition itself make you want to work harder."

This year's competition will consist of three separate rounds for the male and female contestants.

In the first round, there will be individual posing routines by the contestants. These routines will be set to music that each contestant has provided for up to 90 seconds.

Senate weighs possible increase

By CHRISTINE STARR
Staff writer

The Student Senate discussed Wednesday the breakdown of a possible student fee increase, addressing student concerns regarding the amount of the proposed increase and how the money would be distributed.

Speaker of the Senate Luke Neumann said members of the senate met Wednesday with Eastern President David Jorns and Lou Hencken, acting vice president for student affairs, to discuss a possible student fee increase.

The fee increase was originally proposed for next year by the Council of University Planning and Budget in early February as part of a $1.6 million reallocation process of university funds.

Neumann said the current proposal for the fee increase is $66.50 per student.

Of this $66.50, the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union would receive $5 per year and Health Service would receive $40 per year. The increase would also include a $20 computer service fee and a $1 grant and aid fee.

Neumann said he believes the fees will not be used to purchase any new equipment next year but will be used for maintenance of existing departments and equipment.

Student Body President Brian Riordan said the senate will receive an audit of the fee distribution next year.

Neumann said the computer fee will be distributed to the Union to ensure that the money stays at Eastern instead of being given to the Board of Governors.

"If it does go to the (BOG), it may or may not ever come here again," Neumann said. "And next year (Eastern) may have to request it all over again."

The senate also approved former senate member and speaker of the senate Brett Gerber as the non-senate elections co-chairman. Gerber will assist senate elections chairman Jody Stone in running the Student Government spring election, which takes place April 21.

In other business, Neumann said the senate hopes to have the two Charleston mayoral candidates, incumbent Mayor Wayne Lanman and challenger Roscoe M. Cougill, speak to the senate.

Articles contain mistakes

In Wednesday's edition of The Daily Eastern News, the page 1 story on a Charleston City Council meeting contained several serious fact errors.

The city council voted Tuesday to reject two identical liquor license requests from Robert Kincaid of What's Cookin' restaurant, 409 Seventh St., and the Phoenix Dragon, Illinois Route 16, for Class D restaurant licenses.

Two Class D restaurant licenses are available but are reserved for Don Yost of Stix Billiard Bar and Restaurant, 1421 Fourth St., and Taki Iatropoulos, who plans to open Rosie's, a restaurant opening soon on north side of the Charleston Square.

A request by Donna Bickers, owner of Joker's, 1412 Fourth St., to reclassify her Class C license to a Class A license was also defeated.

The city council turned down the three requests primarily to allow time for the Charleston Liquor Advisory Board to review the local liquor code and possibly recommend changes in the licensing process.

However, the board is expected to take four or five months to conduct its inquiry and report back to the council.

Also in Wednesday's News, Faculty Senate candidate John Miller was misidentified as working in the secondary education department. Miller actually works in the music department.

Eastern's admission deadline approaches

By PHIL VOJTANEK
Staff writer

Time is nearly up for Illinois high school students to submit their applications for admission to Eastern for the 1993-94 school year, said the director of admissions.

No cutoff date has been established yet, but the Admissions Office has sent a letter warning guidance counselors at state high schools that the deadline is near, said Dale Wolf, Director of Admissions at Eastern.

Eastern, which accepts all students who meet entrance requirements, limits its enrollment by rejecting applications received after the cutoff date. The cutoff date is set when Eastern has accepted as many students as the school can handle, Wolf said.

As of Wednesday, Eastern was still accepting applications, which is a change from last year when applications were not accepted after Feb. 18.

Despite the longer deadline than last year, Eastern is still doing well, Wolf said.

"We have gotten a fair number," he said. "We are one of two state schools, the (University of Illinois) being the other, that are running ahead of last year's numbers."

"We are getting 7 to 8 percent more applications than last year and are accepting 8 percent more students than last year. These numbers do not affect transfer students though."

Wolf said that it is hard to tell if Eastern will have a larger or smaller enrollment than last year because he is not sure of the exact number of graduates and number of people returning.

"A lot of applications are coming in at this time," Wolf said. "Only President Jorns can announce a cutoff date."

Death of scientist ends jealous dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans remember Dr. Albert Sabin and Dr. Jonas Salk as saviors who rescued the nation's children from a terrifying disease. The two also were powerfully ambitious men locked in a lifelong scientific feud.

Salk's is probably the bigger name. In the 1988 presidential campaign, Michael Dukakis described him as a hero "who discovered a vaccine which cured one of the most dread disease we ever had." The remark must have rankled Sabin. For most of the past 30 years, his vaccine has been used in the United States, not Salk's.

On the other hand, Sabin, who died Wednesday at age 86, achieved an honor that has eluded Salk. Sabin was elected to the National Academy of Sciences, the top honor for American scientists.

Salk won the race to develop a polio vaccine. It was licensed in 1955. But his injectible vaccine, made of killed polio virus, was largely replaced within a decade in the United States by Sabin's oral vaccine, made of a weakened living strain of the virus.

"Albert Sabin was out for me from the very beginning," Salk said two years ago. "In 1960, he said to me, just like that, that he was out to kill the killed vaccine."

Sabin was no more complimentary.

"It was pure kitchen chemistry," Sabin said of Salk's vaccine. "Salk didn't discover anything."

In a statement released after Sabin's death, Salk was more conciliatory. He called Sabin's passing "a great loss," saying, "The effect of his contributions toward the control of polio will endure long in the future."

"They were very competitive," said Dr. Frederick C. Robbins, who knew them both. "Unfortunately, that's not one of the best illustrations of science. Competition isn't always good."

Robbins, now an emeritus professor and dean at Case Western Reserve University, won a Nobel Prize with two colleagues for discovering how to grow polio virus in the test tube.

Faculty Senate should take reform seriously

Two weeks ago, psychology department Chairman Fred Yaffe addressed the Faculty Senate and asked its members to consider looking at the patchwork of faculty governance groups that Eastern now has.

Among the groups besides the senate are the Council on Academic Affairs, the Council of Faculties, the Council on Graduate Studies, the Council on Teacher Education and so on.

"The faculty very rarely meets as a group," Yaffe said in an interview Tuesday. "They may have a view of what is going on, but they don't have an avenue to discuss major issues as a group."

Yaffe said that university-wide concerns don't make it out of departments because the current government system leaves some areas of the school without representation.

"Faculty Senate doesn't answer to anybody and nobody answers to them," Yaffe said.

As a result of Yaffe's visit, the Faculty Senate decided to endorse the formation of a committee to examine Eastern governance system.

While the Faculty Senate does have its critics, Yaffe is not among them. His plans sound more like simple reorganization than a complete look at the role of the Faculty Senate.

Such a look is needed because the senate often strays from the duties it has now.

Craig Eckert resigned from the senate three weeks ago, saying that he felt ineffective because his views weren't being heard. He criticized the senate for ignoring "weightier matters" in favor of petty squabbles.

All one has to do is attend a few meetings to see that the senate often discusses such questionable subjects as evaluating the Textbook Rental Service so students won't have to wait in line in the rain or considering the effect raising the bar entry age might have on enrollment. Discussion has even strayed to 45 minutes of fighting about whether to capitalize the "e" in Eastern Illinois University.

Such ridiculous bickering is beyond the scope of any reorganization process, no matter how thorough. Yaffe's idea of a stronger senate is fine, as long as the senate itself takes the reform process seriously and looks into its own actions also.

Winning the war of the heart

For the last two weeks, I've spoken to, seen, or overheard over a dozen individuals who were experiencing serious relationship problems.

Some of the tumultuous conversation included the following:

"We just fight all the time!"

What do you fight about?

"About stupid stuff."

He or she does things just to make me angry. Sometimes I don't know why I put up with it." I know it may be hard but in regards to what's best for you, why don't you end the relationship.

"I don't want to lose him."

Why not?

"Because I love him."

If you fight all the time and he or she does things just to anger you because you'll forgive him (or her) and go running back, this seems like a one-sided warped kind of love.

"But I don't want to lose him (her)."

And why not?

"Because he's (she's) so cute."

Oh, smother me with gravy and call me stupid! I thought relationships should be built on trust, mutual interests, a common respect and concern for the other. But that's where we make our mistake. We fail to make the distinction between a working relationship and the daily or weekly outing so that everybody can see me with the other because he or she is cute or fine, in the relationship just to be in a relationship, meaningless daily or weekly tryst because we're both sluts kind of relationships.

Getting a mate who looks good is great but don't throw away your self-respect (if applicable) and true happiness for half the package.

Elliott Peppers

My first question in all these cases is how did they get into this relationship. From talking to friends and associates and through using common sense, 10 times out of 10 it's the physical attraction "Ignore the true jerk syndrome" that's the culprit.

This disease runs unchained at Eastern. Sure, everyone sees that attractive person they'd like to get to know. After getting to know him or her, you may find that he or she is a jerk, idiot, pervert, bimbo, or complete airhead, but you choose to ignore all this because the "Ignore the true jerk syndrome" kicks in and you pursue the person as a mate because you think you "got it like that."

Hey, common people most of us are in our early 20s or younger. It's extremely naive and maybe foolish to think "if I don't stay in this relationship now, I may never find another one."

However, in the majority of these rocky relationships, I've found the guy to be at fault because of a lack of sensitivity or sincerity or both. Come on guys. The dumb jock syndrome is passe. If you just don't know any better, I'd be glad to have a personal consultation with you on man/woman etiquette. And ladies. Specifically, I'm speaking to the Robin Givens types. I know you find a nice guy with money who will buy me great stuff and treat me right, but who will receive abuse and a bad attitude in return mentality is not your fault, but inherited. Since Given-types are serious, I will do house-calls.

I think it's time for a self-check and reprioritization of our goals and values (get some if you don't have any).

How can one find true happiness if one is fighting his or her significant other all the time?; if their only or main reason for being with the individual is physical?

Elliott Peppers is a staff writer and guest columnist for The Daily Eastern News.

Apology given on behalf of columnist

Dear editor,

This is in response to the editorial on Thursday, Feb. 25 entitled "Columnist Found Guilty of Intolerance" from the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual and Allies Union. As a Christian, my goal in life is to become more and more like Jesus Christ, the son of the God of Abraham, each and every day. That does not mean that I am perfect. Far from it. It just means that I am trying, with God's strength, to become more like his Son.

Personally, speaking, I would like to apologize on behalf of my brother Chris for reacting judgmentally. He missed one key point. Yes, we do believe that homosexuality/bisexuality is a sin according to the Bible, but the Bible teaches that we are to dislike the ACTIONS THEMSELVES which people do which are sinful instead of the people themselves. you may not make a distinction, but Christ does and so must every Christian.

For the record, I think many people would like to see this pamphlet "What the Bible Really Says About Homosexuality." So would the LGBA please submit the pamphlet to The Daily Eastern News editorial department so it can be published for the entire campus to read? I think many people would argue the accuracy of such a pamphlet.

Let me close by saying again that I apologize to the LGBA for our apparent intolerance.

Brad Pollina

Abortion rights to be discussed

By CYNDI CALHOUN
Staff writer

As a part of Women's History and Awareness Month, the University Board is sponsoring a lecture by Janet Benshoof, one of the nation's leading litigators and legal experts on reproductive rights.

Benshoof will discuss women's reproductive health and abortion rights at 7 p.m. on Thursday in the Grand Ballroom in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union. Tickets are $1 for students and $3 for the general public.

UB member Gail Valke said that Benshoof will be speaking about her pro-choice views and why she supports abortion rights. Valke added that this lecture is an informative event with a question-and-answer session after Benshoof's address.

A graduate from Harvard Law School, Benshoof has been litigating in the field of health and women's rights since 1972. In 1992, she argued a case which fought against the restrictive Pennsylvania abortion statute before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Another prominent case was the City of Akron v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health. In this case, Benshoof again was before the Supreme Court. She was victorious in her challenge of an Ohio statute designed to discourage abortion. This case reaffirmed a woman's right to choose abortion as a fundamental constitutional right.

Also, Benshoof was successful in Medical and Health Research Association of New York, Inc. v. Heckler. This case challenged the Reagan administration's "squeal rule" regarding abortions.

Last year, Benshoof established the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy, a non-profit advocacy and educational organization. Prior to starting the Center, Benshoof served as director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Freedom Project for 15 years.

The center's main goal is to prevent the federal Supreme Court from repealing abortion rights. It also works with topics such as sex education for minors and contraception.

When she is not litigating or lecturing, Benshoof uses her talents to write articles on health and women's rights.

Benshoof's recent publications include a commentary published in the June 1988 issue of the Harvard Law Review and an article in New York University's Journal of International Law.

Student safety topic of Gus Bus meeting

By VICKI MARTINKA
Staff writer

Gus Bus rider safety was one of many student concerns addressed at a Wednesday afternoon meeting of Eastern administrators.

After a student passenger was assaulted by several other individuals last month, questions were raised about the safety of the Gus Bus.

The Gus Bus program was designed to offer Eastern students an alternative to drinking and driving. Currently in its third year, the service provides tavern patrons rides on weekend nights from campus to uptown Charleston and back.

The bus is staffed by two monitors, provided by the greek community, and a driver.

"The monitors' job is to ride the bus and aid the driver in any situation," said Chad Bandy, Interfraternity Council president. "(Monitors) are under the advice of bus drivers. They do what they can to aid the driver."

Eileen Sullivan, assistant director for Student Activities, said, "If there's any trouble, the bus driver is in contact by radio with the city and university police. (We) don't have a police officer on the bus, but police can respond in under a minute."

Also proposed at the meeting was the drafting of a formalized contract regarding the use of the service with the Mayflower Contract Services, the company that leases the Gus Bus.

"Currently, we having nothing in writing with the company," Sullivan said. "We just have a receipt form for the number of weekends to provide service."

Sullivan said she planned to meet with Eastern's General Purchasing Office to request a formal contract with Mayflower.

In other business, concerns of the financing aspects of the Gus Bus were discussed. Local bar owners who participate contribute a payment of $250 each semester, said Brent Gage, Gus Bus coordinator. Ronchetti Distributing Co., a beer distributor in Mattoon, donated $1,500.

In addition to contributions from bar owners, Eastern's Parents Club, Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Council and Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students have all donated to the program.

Bosnians killed after collecting U.S. food

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian civilians, hungry despite airdropped U.S. food and unable to withstand a Serb onslaught, braved deep snow and fighting Wednesday on a desperate trek to safety.

At least 18 people were reported killed in the eastern enclave of Konjevic Polje when they tried to collect food and medicine dropped by U.S. planes. An unconfirmed Bosnian news report said 1,400 people were missing and feared dead in nearby Cerska.

Thousands of other residents reportedly were under fire in the area after Serb fighters drove them from their homes and burned villages. A U.N. official said some refugees were headed toward Tuzla, up to 30 miles away across rugged terrain.

The local military in the region said of the U.S. aid: "We feel like animals to whom bait is being thrown to exterminate us with grenades." In Sarajevo, about 35 miles southwest of Cerska, shelling intensified and the Bosnian army reported Serbs were launching a new offensive, moving in additional tanks, artillery and infantry.

Late Wednesday, an explosion outside the U.S. Embassy in Belgrade caused minor damage, but no injuries, the State Department said in Washington. Details of the incident were not immediately available.

As the fighting raged, the Muslim-led Bosnian government delegation to peace talks at the United Nations joined Bosnian Serbs and Croats in accepting an agreement for a future cease-fire and military withdrawal.

But before the cease-fire and withdrawal can take place, the warring parties must agree to the other points of the peace plan, including a controversial provision calling for dividing Bosnia into 10 semi-autonomous provinces, most of which would be ethnically based.

Anders Levinson, a Danish representative of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Tuzla, said Serb forces had swept civilians out of Cerska and "flattened" the enclave.

He said 10,000 people were sitting in the open under constant shelling in the ruins of nearby Konjevic Polje, including 3,000 children and 1,500 wounded.

Minority groups attend conference

By SHERRY SIDWELL
Student government editor

Four students and an advisor left for Washington D.C. Wednesday in search of cultural diversity.

The four students and advisor Ceci Brinker, assistant director of student activities, will attend the "Demand Diversity" conference in Washington D.C., which begins Thursday and runs through Saturday. The conference will focus on cultural diversity on college campuses.

The student representatives attending will be Shannon Henne of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Allies Union, Shannon Ford of the Black Student Union, Carol Melo of the Hispanic Student Union and John Kohl of Student Government.

The representatives were chosen through an interview process, Student Body President Brian Riordan said. Riordan said he interviewed four Student Government representative candidates. Candidates for LGBAU, BSU and HSU representatives were interviewed by Brinker and David Milberg, director of student activities.

"It was stressed to all candidates that they would have to be willing to come back and implement some of the programs they learned at the conference," Riordan said. "We wanted people who could lead and be leaders."

The representatives will attend a variety of workshops at the conference, Riordan said. Workshops will focus on topics such as relations between black and Hispanic students, relations between black and white students and relations between gay and lesbian organizations and their heterosexual counterparts on campus.

"We met with the (representatives) beforehand to see that all of the important workshops are covered," Riordan said. "We didn't want to see (the representative) all go to the same things because it would defeat the purpose of the trip."

Conference workshops will also center on improving relations between different cultural organizations on campus and promoting student attendance at diversity events.

"One of the main problems with diversity events has always been that you don't get the students there who really need to be there," Riordan said. "You usually end up with only the same students going."

Following the conference, the four representatives will appear at a Student Senate meeting to discuss what they learned and suggest new programs for Eastern's campus.

The trip was sponsored and funded by Student Government.

Refugee to reflect on odyssey

By MIKE FRAGASSI

Highlighting Latino Awareness Week will be a human rights activist recapping the struggles of leaving Guatemala in voyage to the United State.

Lecturer Adriana Bartow, formerly of Amnesty International, was forced to leave her home in Guatemala to save the lives of her family after 32 years of struggling with the Guatemalan government. The lecture will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

"I am not seeking to teach anything," Bartow said. "I just want people to realize we are not statistics, we are humans with flesh and bones."

Bartow began her climb out of poverty when she joined Amnesty International and did an internship that took her and her family to Chicago, where she still resides.

Bartow is no longer a member of Amnesty, but she still speaks for Amnesty International, and other organizations such as the Human Rights Commission in Mexico and the Human Rights Commission in America.

She taught briefly in Guatemala until she was forced to leave because of the war there. The Guatemalan army had killed two of her brothers and kidnapped six other members of her family, including two sisters and one daughter.

Bartow said she has learned how hard it is for a minority to fit in in America. She was forced to learn a new language, cope with different types of weather and deal with ongoing discrimination.

But Bartow said the worst thing was knowing how big of a role America plays in supporting the Guatemalan Army. America supplies money, arms, military advisers and the training of young officers—later to be sent back to Guatemala.

Hot topics create attendance boom

By ADAM McHUGH
Staff writer

The University Board is crediting controversial issues and interesting speakers as essential ingredients on why attendance has been outstanding at several of the board's sponsored events.

But Eastern is one of many universities across the country that has caught on to the growing trend of booking controversial speakers, said Jennifer Eikenberg, a member of UB's communications committee.

"Issues such as homosexual marriage and safe sex are things that students want to hear about," Eikenberg said. "It is not only interesting, but it is also informative."

It is also making a profit. Events sponsored by the board this year — as well as the 1992 fall semester — have reaped in over $1,700 in admission fees. This is a dramatic increase from the $247 totaled at this time last year, UB Chairman Brad Kirk said.

The next UB-sponsored event is "Abortion Rights" with Janet Benshoof at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union. Benshoof is the director of the Reproductive Freedom Project and her speech will address issues such as forced sterilization and contraception.

"This series of lectures about contemporary issues has been extremely successful for us, we hope that it will keep up," Eikenberg said.

It is the controversial speakers that have been drawing most of the attention. Approximately 350 people attended Suzi Landolphi's Feb. 24 lecture "Hot, Sexy, and Safer" and 200 people were in attendance for the Jan. 21 lecture by Craig Dean, executive director of the Equal Marriage Rights Fund and a discrimination attorney who spoke about his motion to legalize gay marriages.

Because of the excellent response she received from students, Landolphi is considering taping a program about safe sex on the Eastern campus, he said.

The lecture by Dean had the large turnout despite the absence of Patrick Gill, his partner in the proposed marriage.

"For the most part, the feedback we have received regarding the lectures has been excellent," Kirk said. "Some people have voiced their concerns about the topics, but we figured that it would happen sooner or later."

But many members of UB see the focus for speakers as not to draw a shocking response, but to instead be an educating tool.

Holly Brunton ascends the stairs to the upper level of the Crisis Pregnancy Center of Eastern Illinois, 914 Monroe.

The House that is a Home

An external view of the victorian home which serves as the Center's workplace.

Holly Brunton stood on the porch of a grand, blue and grey victorian home and spoke softly of her future.

"This place is helping me to focus on what I want to do once I hit 'the real world,'" she said as her head rose up allowing the reflections of stained glass from the church next door to frame her face.

The "place" to which Brunton was referring is the Crisis Pregnancy Center of Eastern Illinois, located just off Charleston's downtown square in a quiet residential area of 914 Monroe.

The Center is a safehouse for those women who have experienced an unwanted pregnancy and are seeking information on their options and support for their eventual choice in the matter.

Through their guiding hand, the Center has helped hundreds of women deal with this difficulty, thus making it an important step in the decision process for the mother.

The Center house is located next to the Charleston Community Church, which windows were still casting colorful light upon Brunton's face as she continued to speak.

"I want to help people when I am out in 'the real world.' So I guess that before I go out there, I will help others here."

Brunton is a sophomore psychology major at Eastern who is balancing schooling with volunteer involvement at the Center.

Later, once inside and safe from the cool March afternoon's breeze in the Center's warmly decorated front room, Brunton was joined by Center director Chris Bugle. Brunton then spoke of the relationship which has grown between herself and her workplace.

"People ask me what I give the Center since I am only a volunteer." The colorful light that once targeted her face while outside was now gone and in its place, shone a clear white light coming in from the windows onto her back, lighting her head from behind. "I give my time and my energy here but it is what the Center has given me so I can pursue what I want to do with my life."

Beyond her multiple hours a week that she invests at the Center, Brunton serves as the director of publicity for the Crisis Pregnancy Center Campus Outreach - the extended arm of the Center into the Eastern campus community.

This campus extension assist in the promotion of the Center's services to those in and around the college.

Since approximately 80 percent of the participants in the program are from the campus pool of students, the CPCCO is vital to the continued operation of the Center's existence.

"We need the young people interested in helping their peer group," said Bugle from a small chair across from Brunton. "Your generation is being sold a lie by my generation about the condom. All that we hope to do is get out the information on all options."

The manner in which this privately funded, 5-county-serving center spreads its "information" on all "options" is through a simple and strictly confidential manner.

"We don't discriminate against anyone here," said a progressively relaxing Bugle, "everything is confidential here."

She mentioned that although the volunteers take on key roles in the operations, they are still required to sign a form concerning the privacy and the rights of the individual participating in the program.

"Without the help of the volunteers like Holly," said Bugle leaning into the window light by shifting to her chair's left arm rest, "none of this would happen."

"They're the backbone of the ministry."

She sat up even further in her seat at the sounds of her own words - self-startled by the use of the word "ministry."

"We're not going to preach to them when they come in," restated Bugle. "The word 'ministry' has so many negatives attached to it these days. We are here to provide information...so that when she makes her choice, it is an informed choice not based on feelings - feelings change, you know."

She then settled back into her chair, out of the direct afternoon light, and said that "we'll be a support system, no matter what their choice."

Of the women who come through the broad arches of the Center's door seeking that "support," less than ten percent "are still involved with the father."

"For the most part," said Bugle, "if the father is still involved at the point when they come here, he usually participates the full way."

The Center often talks with family and or friends who may accompany the mother and involve themselves in helping her through the crisis period. This support is encouraged.

Bugle related an experience concerning a young couple's attempt to deal with an unwanted pregnancy entering into their lives.

The first day that this particular mother-to-be entered the Center, she was accompanied by the father. Throughout the pregnancy, he involved himself in everything that had to be done - delivery classes, pre-birth therapy - all that must be accomplished to deal with the entrance of their child into the world.

The father was by her side during the delivery and assisted the mother in the care of the child while still in the hospital.

The couple then, after an extended and involved series of events leading up to and beyond the birth of their child, gave up the baby for adoption.

The option that the couple choose was indeed a "difficult" one, but it is alternatives that the Center focuses around.

Within the printed confines of the Center's "Statement of Purpose," they clearly state that a "woman who experiences an unwanted pregnancy has four basic options: abortion, adoption, foster care, and parenting."

"I want to stress that this is all confidential," Bugle continued.

She related tales of seeing girls at the store that Bugle - through the manner in which they looked at and ducked from her - could tell that they have been involved with the Center before. "They think that I am going to see them and yell 'hey, I remember you from the Crisis Pregnancy Center.'"

"While they are here, we try to help and provide comfort. I try to forget the face as soon as they walk out the door."

The following day, from the same chair, in the same room, with the only notable absence being the sunlight which was now a claimed victim of the overcast day, Brunton spoke of "comfort."

"When people leave the program, we have them fill out a little questionnaire - what we can do to better help and stuff like that," she explained. "On almost all of them, they say that this is a very comforting place - that it's like a home."

"You know, like a home, this place is comforting."

New editors to take reins of student publications

By JOHN FERAK
Campus editor

Cassie Simpson, Rachel Corbett and Heather Clyde have been selected to lead two of Eastern's official student publications.

Simpson has been selected editor in chief of The Daily Eastern News and Corbett and Clyde were chosen as co-editors of The Warbler, Eastern's yearbook.

New editors for The News assume their posts March 18. The new staff of The Warbler will take over March 10.

Simpson, a graduate of Casey-Westfield High School, is a junior with an English major and a journalism minor.

She is a member of Phi Sigma Sigma sorority and is currently president of the Society for Collegiate Journalists. She also had an internship with The Reporter, a bi-weekly newspaper published in Casey.

"Basically, I'd like to recognize the newspaper's own shortcomings and to improve and build upon the strengths it already has," Simpson said, who currently serves as the

Cassie Simpson

News' managing editor.

Simpson has also held the positions of associate news editor, administration editor, campus editor and activities editor.

Simpson said she plans on finding a job as a reporter when she graduates in May 1994.

For Corbett, this will be her second year as co-editor of The

Rachel Corbett

Warbler. The junior journalism major from Alton served as academic editor for the 1991 yearbook.

Corbett said that unlike newspaper writing, working for the yearbook allows her the freedom to be more creative.

"This year the yearbook will be all black and white," she said. "Next year, I'd like to do something different with the way the book is set up."

Corbett said she would prefer to go into the publication design field after graduating from Eastern.

Clyde, a junior graphic design major, currently serves as design editor for The Warbler. Last year, Clyde was assistant graphic design editor.

"We want to create a unique layout with a combination of photography and graphic design," said Clyde, who graduated from Resurrection High School in Chicago.

Clyde said she wants to pursue a career in advertising when she graduates from Eastern.

Also named for the March to November term for The News were executive members:

- Sophomore journalism and political science major Chris Seper will become managing editor. A West Chicago resident, Seper currently serves as associate news editor.

- Sophomore journalism and history major Chris Sundheim will retain his position as news editor. He is a Charleston resident.

- Junior journalism major Elliott Peppers will be the new associate news editor. Peppers is a resident of East St. Louis and is editor in chief of MINORITY Today.

- Junior journalism major David Putney will become edit page editor. Putney, a native of Norwood, currently serves as administration editor.

Federal agents wait as cult leader breaks his oath

WACO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents appeared to settle in Wednesday for a long wait to the end of a standoff with a heavily armed religious cult whose leader claims he is waiting for God to tell him what to do.

As the siege continued for a fourth day, officials said Branch Davidian leader David Koresh might have more than 100 followers and a "massive weapons cache" inside his fortified compound.

Two elderly women who left the compound Tuesday had fired machine guns and other weapons during battles Sunday that left perhaps 14 people dead, authorities said. The women faced charges including murder.

Negotiations continued Wednesday. A day earlier, Koresh had promised to immediately, peacefully end the deadlock after a 58-minute taped statement he made was played on radio stations.

"Koresh refused to honor his promise and has indicated he will keep his promise to come out when he receives further instruction from God," FBI Agent Jeffrey Jamar said during the first briefing for reporters since Monday. "Koresh stated he had received a message from God instructing him to wait," Jamar said officers aren't contemplating storming the compound.

"The goal is to resolve this situation ultimately in federal court with no further bloodshed," he said.

On Wednesday afternoon, two portable office buildings were brought to the site and food for the agents was replenished. In town, hospitals that had been advised Tuesday to prepare for wounded people were told they could relax security.

The cult is a well-trained, committed fighting force with a "massive weapons cache" at its disposal, Special Agent Earl K. Dunagan of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said in an affidavit.

Koresh "has told federal law officers words to the effect that they would fight to the end," Dunagan said.

In his affidavit, Dunagan said the two women who left the compound Tuesday "did knowingly and willfully use weapons, including machine guns, to commit the violent crime of murder and attempted murder of federal law enforcement officers."

Margaret Lawson, 75, and Catherine Mattson, 77, were charged with murder, attempted murder, conspiracy and commission of a felony with a firearm.

About 100 federal agents raided the compound Sunday to serve warrants charging Koresh with federal firearms violations.

In addition to four dead federal agents, at least 10 cult members were killed, a federal law enforcement source said on condition of anonymity. Newspapers have reported the death toll may be even higher. Officials have confirmed only two deaths inside the compound; Koresh said he was wounded and his 2-year-old daughter was killed.

"There are some bodies," Jamar said, but he didn't know how many. He said three were wounded, but earlier reports put the number much higher.

Jamar said negotiators had been told 43 men, 47 women and 20 children remain inside. Eighteen children have been released since Sunday.

The 77-acre fortified compound includes underground passages and reportedly a firing range. Neighbors have reported hearing gunfire from time to time.

U.S. Attorney Ron Ederer said all adults inside the compound would likely face criminal charges.

Dunagan's affidavit said: "The heavy fusillade of bullets that came from within the site was such that all of the conspirators were involved."

"Video from the shootout shows heavy gunfire from within as cult members fired through walls."

"There is no doubt they were expecting our arrival," said Dan Hartnett, associate director for Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

In Washington, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, who oversees the bureau, said agents had received good training and displayed "incredible bravery."

"Obviously when all of this is through, when you have a major operation like that, there will be an evaluation after the fact as to its effectiveness," said Bentsen, a former U.S. senator from Texas.

Students may pay more for room and board if increase is approved

by JOHN FERAK
campus editor

Eastern students will be paying a modest increase in room and board fees next fall if an increase proposal submitted to the vice president's office is approved.

Presently, all room and board fees include living quarters and meals from Food Service.

Although tuition rates will remain the same, the figures for students living in the residence halls will have an increase of the following:

- Those students preferring the 11-meal option will be paying $1,419 per semester - a hike of $42 from the 1993 spring semester cost of $1,377.

- The 14-meal plan will cost $1,442 per semester - a jump of $44 from the current $1,398.

- Eastern's most requested room and board plan, the 18-meal option, will be $1,474 - up $28 from the current $1,428.

In addition to those increases, students wishing to live in a two-bed residence hall alone will be charged an additional $375 for the meal plan originally chosen by the student. That number is an $85 hike from this semester's $290 charge.

"It's a fair increase," said Acting Director for Student Housing Mark Shaklee. "There's not a lot of fat in the budget."

Shaklee said this year's student housing proposal for the fee increase breaks down to about a 4 or 5 percent hike. This moderate increase in housing is comparable to the 17-year average, which is a yearly raise of 5.51 percent.

In addition to the residence hall housing fee increases, University Court will also experience modest housing increases, Shaklee said.

Currently, there are several different housing options for students living in the University Court. The most expensive option, which includes a one-and-a-half bath and also a balcony, costs $1,540 for the entire school year. Next year, that figure will climb $28 to $1,568.

- The least expensive apartment in the court is a two-bedroom, one bath unit that houses four students. This costs each person $1,266 this semester. That amount will raise $30 next fall to $1,296.

All apartments in the complex are fully-furnished, have two-bedrooms, at least one bath, basic cable, phone service and trash pickup is provided. Students living in University Court pay for their own water and electric bills, said Doris Hamilton, managing director for University Court.

"I don't feel the increase in the housing for University Court is really that much," Hamilton said.

The last facet of university housing affected by the increase will be the University Apartments, which house graduate students and married students or those who have families.

There are two different figures for those selecting to live in the apartments. An apartment with a larger bedroom will cost each individual $262 per month for rent next fall, up $8 a month from $254. An apartment with a smaller bedroom will cost $243 a month next semester for rent. That amount is also an $8 hike from the $235 currently charged.

"This increase, when you look at all the other state universities in Illinois... Eastern is still the most reasonably priced housing in the state," Shaklee said.

After the housing budget was passed last Wednesday by the student housing committee, it was forwarded to Acting Vice President for Student Affairs Lou Hencken for his approval. The committee is made up of residence hall association and Student Government members.

Shaklee said that before the committee drew up the 1993/94 school year housing budget, it took into consideration inflationary factors which usually are around 5 percent annually and salary increases in staff and housing personnel.

If the budget is approved by Hencken, it then will be sent to the President's Council. The earliest the budget will probably be approved is May 1.

Depth to remain key for women's swimming team

By PAUL DEMPSEY
Staff writer

The women's swimming squad completed a very successful season, and although they are losing a number of valuable seniors, good depth and a number of good recruits should help the Lady Panthers continue their winning ways next year.

The women's squad finished with a dual meet record that was over .500 and also had a very impressive 3-1 invitational record. "The women had a good year," Ray Padovan said. "We were so well balanced all the way through."

The squad was improved greatly when they acquired junior transfer Debbie Habben last year and senior transfer Jamey Meneley this year.

The women started the season with losses to Butler and Valparaiso at a meet in Indianapolis, and then tore through the rest of the season winning four straight dual meets and six of their last nine.

After stumbling in their first meet, the women beat the University of Indianapolis, Northeastern Illinois, and Bradley before finishing second at the Panther Invitational to Evansville University by a mere 13 points.

The Lady Panthers then beat St. Louis University and began the month of December with a rematch against Evansville, this time in a dual meet. The Aces overcame Eastern again by another slim margin, 29 points.

The women continued to swim strongly as they won the Vincennes Invitational before Christmas break and then the Bradley Invitational in Peoria after participating in the College Swim Forum in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. over break.

Down the stretch of the season, the Lady Panthers won two dual meets and lost two before coming to the Mid-East Championships in February where they won for the third straight year. The women did not fare well in the Mid-Continent Conference meet but that could not put a damper on such a fine season.

Padovan was very pleased with the women saying "Right across the board we really had a tremendous season."

Four of Eastern's swimming records were broken this season. Sophomore Annell Metzger broke two 10-year-old records in the 500 freestyle and the 1000 freestyle. Metzger also figured in another record as she along with seniors Debbie Habben and Kim Beasey and junior Ronae Scheuer broke a record in the 800 freestyle relay. The fourth record was broken by freshman Maridee Hisgen in the 200 IM.

One of the obvious standouts for the women's squad is sophomore Metzger. Along with three records, Metzger helped to provide the depth that the Lady Panthers utilized this season as well as being able to return for two more seasons for a squad losing seven seniors.

"I think the outlook for us next year is pretty good," Metzger said.

Other standouts returning for Eastern next year are freshmen Martha Weidlich and Maridee Hisgen, and juniors Heather Hofman and Scheuer.

Of the six leaving include Kim Beasey who leaves Eastern with school records in the 400 IM and the 200 fly.

Also departing will be Habben, Meneley and Delynn Wirth. Divers Karen Adkins and Lisa Otto are graduating as well.

Lack of swimmers hurt men

By PAUL DEMPSEY
Staff writer

At the start of the swim season, coach Ray Padovan knew that his men's squad would be a little short on swimmers. Unfortunately, things didn't get any better.

"We were a little bit low in numbers at the start of the season, and things got worse," Padovan said. "Some of them (swimmers) dropped off, for whatever reason they did. We struggled a bit, especially in some of the dual meets with a lack of numbers."

The men's squad did not post a good dual meet record, but that did not stop the swimmers from breaking individual marks.

"Actually, when we look at what we did at the end of the year, we had a phenomenal season," Padovan said. "The place wasn't what we wanted, but as far as what the individuals did, and what they accomplished, most everybody we had swam lifetime best times. You can't ask for any better than that."

When the men returned from the College Swim Forum that was held in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. over Christmas break, their season seemed to take a turn for the better.

After tough losses at the Bradley Invitational and Western Illinois, it looked like they had a victory at Millikin. But they came up one fresh swimmer short in the last event and lost by two points. Then, in February, they beat Principia College and went on to the Mid-East Championships where a number of Eastern swimmers turned in strong performances.

"We really felt like it was a great season regardless of win-loss record or anything else," Padovan said. "We have some swimmers that have really progressed and it's going to be a lot to build on next year."

Senior Shawn O'Neill had a strong year in what was his first full season at Eastern. During his freshman year, his season was limited because of National Guard duty, and as a sophomore he was called to the Persian Gulf for Desert Storm. As a junior he badly cut his arm and did not complete the season. O'Neill will return next year with a full year of eligibility left.

Sophomore Jason Wrone was a welcome surprise this year. Wrone, who had a decent freshman year, surprised many including Padovan.

"Jason Wrone was just phenomenal," Padovan said. "He did a good job last year and just progressed fantastically."

Another young member of the men's squad that has contributed tremendously is freshman Mark Donahue. Donahue is the only diver on the men's team and has handled the pressure well.

Donahue learned six new dives in his first season and also a whole routine for the 3M board. He finished 8-8 in dual meets, and in the win at Principia College, came within 40 points of breaking the school record in the 1M board. Donahue will be joined by two or maybe three new divers next season.

The men's squad is only graduating three people, but three of twelve is a large percentage. Seniors Jeff Moll, Matt Fields and Marcus Sherman have ended their careers here at Eastern.

Lemieux resumes focus on hockey

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux, finally able to focus on hockey rather than his health, said Wednesday he rarely thought about his cancer even during his daily radiation treatments.

Talking at length for the first time about his two-month fight with Hodgkin's disease, Lemieux said he is confident the disease is in remission and he can turn his attention toward winning another Stanley Cup.

And, maybe, even a fourth NHL scoring title.

"It feels great I can get back to doing what I love best — playing hockey," Lemieux said. "Hopefully, I can get back on top of my game in the next couple months and get ready for the playoffs."

Hours after completing his 22nd and final radiation treatment Tuesday, Lemieux chartered a plane to Philadelphia for the Pittsburgh Penguins' 5-4 loss to the Flyers. He had a goal and an assist despite the fatigue resulting from the radiation and his long layoff.

Lemieux wasn't surprised at his remarkably quick return — doctors initially said he would require two weeks of post-radiation recovery — but his teammates were almost incredulous. So were his doctors.

"He's an amazing, amazing athlete," lineman Rick Tocchet said. "People don't realize what (radiation) does to you. He was nothing short of brilliant."

Devils beat Whalers in high scoring game

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Tom Chorske and Alexander Semak scored two goals each in the second period as the New Jersey Devils beat the Hartford Whalers 7-4 Wednesday night.

The Whalers led 2-1 after the first period, but the Devils dominated the second period to move within two points of second-place Washington in the Patrick Division. Hartford fell to 2-12-1 against Patrick teams.

Peter Stastny, Stephane Richer and Bruce Driver also scored for the Devils, who won their third straight. Yvon Corriveau, Geoff Sanderson, Mark Janssens and Murray Craven connected for Hartford.

Sanderson hit the left goalpost 37 seconds into the second period with New Jersey goalie Craig Billington down. From that point on it was all New Jersey, with the Devils outshooting the Whalers 17-3 in the period.

Chorske started the Devils' domination on a rush up right wing.

He slid the puck in on Sean Burke and it popped over Burke's stick into the net just before Chorske crashed into the cage.

Semak scored 2:26 later, faking a pass in front, then shooting.

Burke made the stop, but Semak flipped in the rebound as he was falling down. Semak scored again at 8:17. Burke made the initial save on Claude Lemieux, but Semak alone in front put the rebound into an open net.

Chorske knocked Burke out of the net with his seventh goal, skating around defenseman Dan Kecmer and beating the goalie to the far side with a wrist shot. Frank Pietrangelo replaced Burke.

Richer added a goal to give the Devils a 6-2 lead.

Sanderson's goal with 18 seconds left in the first period ended a streak of 149:06 of the Devils not allowing an even-strength goal. New Jersey gave up one short-handed and five power-play goals during the streak.

Rocky Mania gets off to early start

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Rocky Mania extends a good 900 miles from Denver, at least as far as this southern Arizona outpost.

How else to explain more than 100 fans sitting patiently in Hi Corbett Field on Tuesday and watching — well — grass grow. The Colorado Rockies were still in their clubhouse attending a late-morning meeting with the head of the players association, but the fans weren't deterred.

"My buddy and I drove all the way from Colorado — 900 miles, about 14 hours," said Chris, a 20-year-old college student who asked that his last name not be used. He was playing hooky from school.

"We've got tickets for the opener in Denver, but we just couldn't wait," he said.

When the Rockies finally took the field, Chris saw them do stretching and running, then take infield practice and work on base-stealing and pickoff moves. Next came batting practice. Then some more work on fundamentals.

Not the sort of stuff to excite the average fan. But for Chris and other Colorado fans, it was enough just seeing 62 players dressed in Rockies uniforms.

"Just looking at these guys in their black jerseys, it gives me chills," said Dennis Robinson, 52, of Aurora, Colo.

He and his wife, Emily, had taken a week's vacation, intending to catch the Rockies' first exhibition game here on Saturday against the San Francisco Giants. That game has been sold out at 8,000-seat Hi Corbett.

"We've been waiting for big-league baseball in Denver for a long time," Robinson said. "You see these guys out there and you hear the sound of a ball popping in someone's mitt — and you realize, it's really going to happen, isn't it? They're playing for real."

Hurley sets mark

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke point guard Bobby Hurley became the NCAA's all-time assist leader Wednesday night, notching his 1,039th career assist against Maryland.

Hurley broke the mark of 1,038 set by North Carolina State's Chris Corchiani from 1988-1991.

He set the record at the 11:02 mark of the first half on an entry pass from the right wing to reserve Erik Meek, who was fouled on the basket. Play was delayed briefly as the Cameron Indoor Stadium crowd cheered wildly for Hurley.

Entering the game, Hurley needed five assists for the record.

After missing on his first three chances — two misses by Chris Collins and another by Cherokee Parks — Hurley got his first assist at the 16:32 mark on a layup by Collins on a fast break.

Parks atoned for his earlier miss by getting a layup at 15:46 as part of a three-point play. Hurley's third assist came after he stole the ball from Kevin McLinton and threw a three-quarter length pass to Parks under the Duke basket.

Hurley blocked a McLinton shot, came up with the loose ball and hit Hill for a basket and foul with 12:30 left. He tied Corchiani on a pass to Marty Clark, who popped out on the right wing and hit a jumper just inside the 3-point arc.

Northern Iowa

giving Northern Iowa six No.1 seeds and two No.2 seeds. Historically, the actual seeding has varied very little from the pre-seeding picks.

Leading Northern Iowa are Scott Hassel at 134 pounds, Steve Hartle at 142, Jamie Byrne at 158, Dave Malecek at 190 and Justin Greenlee at heavyweight. Hassel, Byrne and Malecek are defending regional champions at their weight classes, while Hartle and Greenlee both finished second last year.

Illinois State looks to be the "best of the rest" on paper, as the Redbirds snared two No.1 pre-seeds in Kevin Bracken at 142 and Pat Duggan at 177.

Coach Kevin Bellis has high hopes for five members of his squad though, because besides Bracken and Duggan's top-seeds, he has Matt Gruszka seeded second at 167 at Mike Renella at 118 and Sam Galvan at 134 each seeded third.

"We know UNI is the top team here, so our goal is to come in and place second as a team," said Bellis. "Ideally, we want to qualify at least five wrestlers and get at least two champions. I think if we wrestle as well as we are capable of, we have a chance to do all of those things."

Southwest Missouri State should give the Redbirds a battle for the second spot though, bringing Tony Dong at 126, Ted Hickey at 150 and Jim Prendergast at 158 - all of whom have been ranked in the national top 20 in their weight class all season. Southwest Missouri State will also have Dan Rule at 177, who is seeded second and has battled with Illinois State's Duggan all season long.

Still, SMSU coach John

Kriebs just wants to see his team wrestle as well as they can - hoping the rest will come.

"It's very important for all of our wrestlers to wrestle well and try to finish the season on a good note," Kriebs said. "Not only are we trying to send people to nationals - several of which have very good shots - but we are trying to build for the future."

Northern Illinois has had its share of ups and downs this season, but the Huskies come in with at least one strong shot at national qualifying in 158 pounder T.C. Dantzler, last years runner-up to UNI's Jamie Byrne. The two should battle once again.

After that though, Northern drops off, having no one else pre-seeded in the tournament's top three.

Valparaiso rounds out the group of full 10-member squads, and will have its hands full trying to get out of the basement in team standings - the exact same place they finished last season. Valpo has no wrestlers seeded in the top three.

Bringing partial squads to the tournament are Marquette University and Chicago State.

Marquette brings seven grapplers this weekend, led by Bill Kumprey, who is the defending regional champion at 167.

Despite the small squad, the Crusaders have high hopes for the weekend, hoping not only to qualify Kumprey for the second straight season, but Jerry Barretson at 177 and Brian Porter at 150.

"I honestly feel that both Bill and Jerry are potential top-seeds, although Bill is probably the only one who will get one," said Marquette coach Jim Schmitz. "Our overall goals are to have the freshmen have a strong showing and get some experience, for the juniors to show continued improvement, and the seniors to win the regional."

"Although we come in open at three weight classes, finishing in the top four is still a possibility for this squad."

Chicago State rounds out the eight team field, bringing seven wrestlers of its own.

The strength of the squad is in senior heavyweight Dale Rowlett, who Chicago State coach Darrick Hardy feels should get a second or third seed. His other hope lies in his other senior, Maurey Garrett, who has been recovering from a shoulder injury the last two weeks.

"Dale should really be either the second or third seed, because he has wrestled everybody but Illinois State and Northern Iowa," said Hardy. "Maurey should also have a strong chance if he is healthy. He's been resting and getting some therapy for the last two weeks. If he's 100 percent, he should battle for the top spot."

The Regional is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. in the Lantz Fieldhouse, with the finals and consolation championships being held in Lantz Gym later that evening.

Bulls beat Mavs without Jordan

CHICAGO (AP) — Scottie Pippen scored 24 points and Horace Grant 21 Wednesday night as the Chicago Bulls had no trouble beating the Dallas Mavericks 125-97 despite the absence of Michael Jordan.

Jordan, nursing a sore right ankle, is expected to play Friday night against San Antonio. It was the first time the Bulls won in their last six games without Jordan in the lineup.

The woeful Mavericks tied a franchise record with their 26th consecutive road loss. They are 0-26 on the road and 4-50 overall this season, with 12 straight defeats.

The victory was the Bulls' seventh in a row, matching their longest streak of the season.

B. J. Armstrong added 18 points for Chicago, which had seven players in double figures. Dallas was led by Terry Davis with 24 points.

The Bulls took control in the second quarter when they outscored Dallas 34-17 en route to a 66-46 halftime lead. Trent Tucker's two 3-pointers increased a 10-point advantage to 57-43.

Pippen had 15 points and Armstrong 13 in the first half, when Chicago outshot Dallas 63 percent to 46 percent.

In the third quarter, Grant's 12-foot jumper gave the Bulls a 94-64 lead with 3:14 left.

The fourth quarter was played mostly by reserves as the Bulls cruised to their 40th win against 17 losses.

Orlando on Feb. 26.

Steve Smith, who hit 12 of 15 from the floor, had a career-high 30 points for Miami, while Glen Rice scored 23 and Grant Long 21.

Larry Stewart led Washington with 22 points.

Jazz 106 Pistons 98

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Karl Malone scored 38 points and Utah ended a five-game losing streak by defeating Detroit in the teams' first meeting since Dec. 14, 1991.

The last time the Jazz and Pistons faced each other, in Salt Lake City, Isiah Thomas received a 40-stitch gash when he was elbowed by Malone. On Wednesday, Thomas' season-high 40 points nearly led the Pistons back from a 16-point fourth-quarter deficit.

The Jazz led 89-73 with 8:50 to play, but Detroit scored the next 10 points, capped by Thomas' off-balance 3-pointer with 5:48 left.

Utah led 93-85 when Dennis Rodman was called for a technical foul. Jeff Malone made the free throw, and then converted another eight seconds later when Detroit received an illegal defense technical.

Jeff Malone scored 22 points and Rodman had 10 points and 21 rebounds for Detroit.

Celtics 132 Spurs 91

BOSTON (AP) — Sherman Douglas had 23 points and 12 assists, his best game in two seasons with Boston, leading the Celtics' rout of San Antonio.

The Celtics led by as many as 47 points in the fourth quarter as they won their sixth straight home game and sent the Spurs to their 15th loss in 16 games at Boston Garden.

The Spurs, playing without injured All-Star forward Sean Elliott and with All-Star center David Robinson limited by a thumb injury, have won just two of eight games since winning 18 of 19.

It was the worst loss for San Antonio under coach John Lucas, who took over the Spurs on Dec. 18.

Robert Parish had 19 points and 11 rebounds for the Celtics, who shot 59 percent, and Kevin Gamble added 19 points. Reggie Lewis, Boston's top scorer this season, missed the game with a lower back strain.

Panthers continue road woes

By DON O'BRIEN
Staff writer

The road woes continued for Eastern's men's basketball team Wednesday.

The Panthers stuck with Illinois-Chicago for the first half at the UIC Pavillion, but the Flames pulled away in the second half to come away with an 87-77 Mid-Continent Conference victory. That snapped the Panthers four-game winning streak.

"We just got stagnant (offensively)," Eastern head coach Rick Samuels said following the loss. "We didn't play with any enthusiasm and we didn't even play at some times."

With the loss, Eastern fell to 7-9 in the Mid-Con and will be the No. 6 seed in the conference tournament, which tips off

Sunday at Wright State University. The Panthers, who are now 10-16 overall, will play the host Riders, the No. 3 seed, in Sunday's opening round.

Illinois-Chicago finished its conference season with a 9-7 record and nailed down the No. 4 seed with the win. The Flames, who are 15-14 overall, will play No. 5 seed Wisconsin-Green Bay in the opening round of the tournament.

The Panthers trailed 36-31 at the half. Sophomore guard Derrick Landrus opened up the second half with a 3-pointer from the top of the key that sliced the UIC lead to two points.

That would be as close as the Panthers would get for the remainder of the game.

The Flames put together a 12-3 run over the next five minutes to build a double-digit lead. The Flames were able to keep that lead for much of the second half.

The Panthers didn't help themselves by turning the ball over 23 times. Making matters worse was the fact the UIC was making nearly all of its shots from the free throw line late in the game. The Flames connected on 23 of their 30 free throws in the second half.

"We didn't protect the ball very well," Samuels said. "You have to focus yourself better when you are on the road. Every little thing adds up to something bigger when you are on the road."

UIC turned to sophomore forward Sherrell Ford and junior guard Kenny Williams to help build their lead. Williams scored 14 of his team-high 21 points in the second half, while Ford scored 10 of his 17 points in the half.

Not only did the Panthers lose the game, but they may have lost one of their starters for the conference tournament. Sophomore forward Andre Rodriguez was rolled off on a stretcher with 6:51 remaining in the first half after he fell to the floor following a hard foul.

He was taken to the UIC Medical Center for observation and X-rays on his neck and head.

"It was just a mild concussion," Samuels said. "He was groggy. We don't know how bad it is right now. But he did have feeling in all of his limbs."

Samuels said that he did not know whether Rodriguez would be able to play by the time the conference tournament rolls around Sunday.

Lady Panthers lose services of two seniors

With the start of Eastern's spring softball season rapidly approaching, the Panthers will head into the new season without the services of two key players from last year's team.

Seniors Tammy Stice and Annette Trivica left the team of their accord last fall, but Eastern coach Beth Perine is confident that younger players will be able to step up to fill the hole.

"There's no ill feelings toward Tammy or Annette," Perine said. "They made their decisions based on what they wanted to do. But I don't think we'll be hurt without them because we have very talented individuals this year."

Stice was the Panthers' starting shortstop and leading hitter from the 1992 team. She started in 42 games for the 20-24 Panthers, hitting .318. She also was among the NCAA leaders with nine triples, led the team in hits and home runs, while tying for the team lead in runs batted in and doubles.

Trivica was the Panthers' top catcher last year, starting in 39 games. She batted .198 but was stellar behind the plate. She had a team best .991 fielding average, committing two errors.

"I truly feel it's important to want to be on the field," Perine said. "You have to want to be here to be effective. So will it hurt us? I don't think so. We have 13 people who want to play and are hungry to play."

Senior Brandi Brewer will be looked upon to provide some leadership as she is the only senior returning to the Lady Panthers' squad.

Perine, though, has found a pair of freshman replacements for the departed seniors and said she is confident they will be able to overcome their inexperience. The Panthers will also be using two freshmen pitchers and a sophomore center fielder.

"We're going to be young-up-the-middle and we're going to have less experience. But we had a very competitive and complete fall season," Perine said. "Four freshmen made all-tournament teams at the positions they will be playing this spring. So they do have competitive collegiate experience at their positions. But yes, they're still young."

Replacing Stice and Trivica will be freshman Shannon Hutson and Sharna McEwan. Hutson will start at shortstop for the Panthers and McEwan, a red-shirt freshman from Queensland, Australia, will start behind the plate.

With the departure of graduated senior pitcher Chris Koehl, Perine has found two freshmen to step up to complement junior pitcher/second baseman Coli Turley. Amy Bradle and Melissa Porzel combined for a 9-3 record during Eastern's fall season and will play a big role for the team this spring according to Perine.

The Panthers will try to start their season this weekend in a round-robin tournament at the University of Missouri. They were originally scheduled to play at the Southern Illinois Classic Saturday and Sunday, but that was canceled because of the weather.

Other teams at the Missouri tournament will be DePaul and possibly Western Illinois.

The NCAA West Regional Wrestling Tournament is coming to Eastern this Saturday, and the race for second is going to be the show to watch.

The eight-team regional is expected to be dominated by the University of Northern Iowa, which has spent much of the season ranked in the nation's Top 20 wrestling squads, while the other seven schools — Eastern, Illinois State, Northern Illinois, Southwest Missouri State, Chicago State, Marquette University and Valparaiso — will try to grab what ever National Tournament berths the UNI Panthers leave open.

"We don't care about team scores but about individuals. Anything less than eight qualifiers to the National Tournament would be a disappointment for us," said Northern Iowa coach

Don Briggs. "Our goals are geared toward the NCAA Championships all season. If we wrestle to our capabilities, we could finish in the top seven or eight teams in the nation and have three or four All-Americans."

And prepare is what the Panthers have done this season, wrestling 16 teams in the nation's top 25, including six in the top 10. That has paid off in the tournament's pre-seeding—with the actual tournament seeding being done Friday night at a meeting of all eight coaches
